QUESTION: Grievance mechanisms
How can we improve?

Establish a grievance /complaints process (grievance mechanism) communicated to internal and external stakeholders that meets the following standards:

- It can be used to receive, resolve and remedy labor exploitation and modern slavery-related complaints; and,
- It is effective; i.e., it is accessible, predictable, fair, rights-based, transparent, confidential or anonymous, and it bans retaliation or reprisal. Consider whether parties know the mechanisms exists, can access it in their own language and can raise grievances anonymously.

Consider involving external stakeholders in its design and communication such as suppliers, workers and civil society organizations.

QUESTION: Response and Remediation
How can we improve?

Develop a remediation framework that clearly sets out steps to take to investigate and remediate a breach or an incident. It involves:

- responding to individuals that have been harmed; and,
- preventing and mitigating potential harms.

Investigation includes collecting and verifying information (ensuring witnesses or interviewees are protected from retaliation or reprisal), identifying if harm has occurred and developing responses to address it.

Consider these principles as part of the framework:

- Remediation should aim to "make good" the harm and restore the individual or group to the position they were in before suffering harm. This may involve a range of actions, such as facilitating access to health, legal or psychosocial services, repatriation or financial compensation.
- Your role in providing remediation will depend on how you are connected to the harm – i.e., whether your activities caused, contributed to or were directly linked to it. It may involve providing remedy directly or using your leverage to require others to take action.
- Consider the channels by which breaches or incidents might be identified or received including due diligence and grievance mechanisms.

The remediation framework should also:

- Assign responsibility for leading and managing the framework;
- Ensure the executive and Board are kept informed throughout the process;
- Require reviewing the breach or incident following remediation to identify lessons learned and the mitigation and prevention actions required, including ongoing due diligence regarding the risks related to the breach or incident.
